

Awards

In July 2000, the National Catholic Educational Association and Boston College selected the Benilde Program as a Specific Programs Improving Catholic Education award recipient. Fifteen SPICE awards are bestowed on programs nationwide that are found to be worthy of replication. In conjunction with the award, other schools nationwide have an opportunity to receive information about how to create their own program.

In April of 2005, the Benilde Program was awarded a second SPICE award from the National Catholic Educational Association and Boston College. The Benilde Program was selected as one of nine previous SPICE award winners from the past decade. With the recognition, the Benilde Program received national publicity with articles featured in Momentum Magazine, Today's Catholic Teacher, and presentations given at Boston College and the NCEA convention in New Orleans in 2006.